2 The Swordwind

The Aeldari of Biel-Tan — the most warlike of the Craftworlds — are consumed by bitterness. Despite their depleted ranks and their broken vessel, they continue their campaign of xenocide against every lesser race of the galaxy.

Of all the Aeldari, it is those of Biel-Tan who struggle most fiercely to recover their glory from before the Fall. In its quest to restore its race's galactic dominion, the people of Biel-Tan place a greater importance on the Warrior Path than the other Craftworlds. These Aeldari know that a new empire can be forged only in the crucible of war, strengthened on the anvil of combat and quenched in blood. As a result, Exarchs are far more numerous on Biel-Tan than elsewhere. The most dangerous among them form the Court of the Young King. The duties of this elite unit include the awakening of the Avatar, who rests at the heart of the Craftworld. Led by the incarnation of Khaine, the Aspect Warriors of Biel-Tan fight as if possessed.

Having long since abandoned the concepts of tolerance and mercy, their barely contained rage drives them to massacre anything that stands in their way.

Biel-Tan's war host is called the Bahzhakhain, which means the "Swordwind", but also the "storm of blades" or "frozen leaves falling under the scythe", depending on the pronunciation. The Swordwind strikes quickly and surely. Its tactics rest on a brutal, concentrated attack led by the Aspect Warriors, aimed at annihilating the opponent in a single blow. Its enemies are often defeated before they even realise they are under attack.

Long before the Fall, the Aeldari fertilised arid worlds so that in time they would become flourishing paradises. The Exodites colonised some of these planets, but the majority remained virgin. The inhabitants of Biel-Tan consider these worlds an essential link with their past and a vital source of resources: when the time comes to reclaim their inheritance, the Aeldari reconquest will set out from the paradisiacal Maiden Worlds and the Exodite planets.

Biel-Tan therefore regards even the slightest colonisation of these worlds by other races as a threat to the restoration of the Aeldari empire. Their prodigious ire is most often directed at the Orks, whose prolific, destructive, and invasive nature represents a grave threat to these paradisiacal worlds. Likewise, Imperial explorers sometimes land on one of these planets, and their successors often find of them only disjointed bones cleaned by the local predators.

It was during the defence of one of these Maiden Worlds that Biel-Tan was struck full force. The forces of Slaanesh, led by the Daemon Herald called the Masque, forced the Swordwind to fight on Ursulia, where an immense daemonic army awaited them. The Masque's ruses and artifices broke the seals of a Webway portal leading into Biel-Tan, and a daemonic horde struck at the heart of the Craftworld. There, Slaanesh's herald infiltrated the Infinity Circuit in order to contaminate the ancestral souls of the Craftworld. The daemonic invaders were destroyed only thanks to the intervention, in extremis, of the Ynnari, who used the dead of the Infinity Circuit to awaken Ynnead, the Whispering God.

The Craftworld is now broken. Some parts are still scorched and desolate, and its solar sails hang in tatters. The Bonesingers work tirelessly to keep the Craftworld running, and the ghost halls swell with the new wraithbone constructs animated by the souls of those the Infinity Circuit can no longer protect. Nearly half of Biel-Tan's inhabitants are gone: those who did not die have joined the ranks of the Ynnari, drawing the wrath of those who blame Yvraine for the catastrophe that has befallen the Craftworld. Those who remain cling more than ever to their orthodox methods, dedicating themselves with vigour to exterminating their enemies and establishing a new Aeldari civilisation that will rival their ancient empire.

The fate of Craftworld Biel-Tan was intimately bound to the precarious rise of the Ynnari. Since the crack in the wraithbone endoskeleton that formed its Infinity Circuit, the moon-sized Aeldari Craftworld had gradually fragmented. Biel-Tan now resembled a fleet more than a single vessel, its strength almost halved by the turmoil born on the paradisiacal but corrupted world of Ursulia. These Aeldari had plunged into civil war because of the dissensions Yvraine had aroused — for a great part of those who had turned away from Biel-Tan had followed her to become Ynnari, aggravating the Craftworld's already critical situation.

Self-confidence, a quality the surviving Asuryani regarded as the greatest virtue, brought them salvation. The people of Biel-Tan, steeped in optimism, believed that the Aeldari empire would rise like a phoenix from its ashes after coming so close to extinction. Biel-Tan would soon show its strength and its capacity to spread its power across a domain even vaster than before.

During the invasion of the trio of Exodite worlds called the Three Sisters by the forces of Chaos, Biel-Tan went to war, led by three legendary Phoenix Lords: Baharroth, Fuegan, and Karandras. Baharroth and Fuegan received a warm welcome, for the arrival of a disciple of Asuryan always gave rise to great rejoicing, let alone two. But when Karandras appeared on Khazhar and scythed down a great part of the daemonic cavalry, a wave of unease spoiled the Asuryani's joy. According to prophecy, at the moment of the Rhana Dandra — that final apocalyptic battle against Chaos that would bring the ruin of all — the six Phoenix Lords would fight together. Would the three become six, a sign that the day of judgement was near?

3 Special Rules

3.1 Allies

You may spend 25% of your points on allies from the Harlequins Codex.

3.2 Harlequins

Harlequins are immune to Morale and to all morale-based powers if they are fighting a Chaos army.

3.3 Master Mime

The Master Mime is a Special Formation but is not deployed on the battlefield. Instead, the Formation is used once per game, fulfilling its role, and is then no longer usable. As the Master Mime cannot be destroyed, it is considered Broken as soon as it is played.

Play the Master Mime on an enemy detachment during the Orders Phase, just after all orders have been given. The targeted detachment automatically loses its order and may no longer receive another in subsequent turns until it has unmasked the Master Mime (it then acts as a detachment with no order). To do so, the detachment takes a Morale test during each End Phase. As soon as it succeeds, the Master Mime is discovered and the detachment may receive orders again on the following turn.

The Master Mime cannot be played against a detachment with no Morale value, or against Daemonic, Robotic, Flyer, Floating, or Tyranid detachments.

4 Special Abilities

4.1 Web

When a detachment with a weapon that has the Web ability shoots at bases in a terrain feature (or at bases occupying one) that grants a cover save, the webs may render it impassable. To determine whether the terrain becomes impassable, roll 1D6 and consult the following table, counting the number of attack dice with the Web ability firing at the terrain feature.

If the terrain becomes impassable, the bases present in it are pushed out of it, their position chosen by the player who owns them. It also becomes Dangerous Terrain, with the same effects and To-Hit / AP as the weapon firing the web. The terrain remains impassable for 2 turns.

To-Hit	Number of dice
6+	1
5+	2
4+	3
3+	4+

4.2 Spirit Stone

A base with the Spirit Stone rule has the Inorganic and Fearless abilities.

A detachment with the Spirit Stone ability must always remain within 12 cm of an allied living Aeldari detachment (that is, one that does not have the Spirit Stone ability), and duplicates that detachment's orders. If there are several such detachments, the player chooses the living detachment whose orders it wishes to duplicate. Detachments with the Spirit Stone ability within range of an allied base's Psychic Node ability receive orders freely. If at the start of the Orders Phase the detachment is more than 12 cm from any allied living Aeldari detachment and outside any Psychic Node, it receives a Charge order and moves toward the nearest allied living Aeldari detachment without engaging enemy detachments in assault (it goes around them by the shortest path). It may only engage in an assault against an enemy detachment that is itself engaged in an assault against the nearest allied Aeldari detachment. If there is no living Aeldari on the table, detachments with the Spirit Stone ability are considered to have No Orders.

4.3 Cannot Be Blocked

Bases with this ability may always disengage from an assault with no opportunity attack possible, and ignore terrain and enemy control zones during their movement.

4.4 Holo-Field

Some units use a protection system known as a Holo-Field. This device wreaks havoc upon targeting systems and makes the unit difficult to hit. The field's dispersion and the distortion it produces depend on both the mass of the unit and the speed at which it is moving.

A Holo-Field grants Protection ($X+$) against all shooting, depending on the order of the base it protects.

Protection	Order
5+	First Fire / Immobilised
4+	Advance / Fall Back
3+	Charge / Forced March

4.5 Vibro Cannon ($-X$)

When a detachment or a weapon with the Vibro Cannon ability fires, trace a single imaginary line per detachment from one of the bases to its target. All bases crossed by this line are hit with an AP equal to $-X$ times the number of weapons firing at the same time.

The shot has the Reduces Cover (-1), Subterranean Fire, and Damages Buildings ($2/-X$) abilities, with an AP equal to $-X$ times the number of weapons firing at the same time.

Vibro Cannons cannot make Intercept Fire. For a structure, half of the bases present in garrison are hit. Due to its nature, it stops at the first structure it encounters, which it may damage.

4.6 Psychic Node (X)

All Spirit Stone detachments within X cm may receive orders normally.

4.7 Prescience (X)

All Aeldari detachments within X cm of the base with this ability do not need to receive orders during the Orders Phase. Instead they receive an order during the Movement Phase when they are activated, by placing an order in front of them. This power does not function on troops that follow the Spirit Stone rule.

4.8 Banshee Cry (X+)

The cry of the Howling Banshees acts as a Lance (X+/psi), being Psychic Attacks. This lance functions only against Classes 1 and 2. In addition, a Class 1 or 2 detachment charged by Howling Banshees cannot make Intercept Fire.

4.9 Fire Prism

These cannons may fire at another Fire Prism, using it as a relay for their shot. A Fire Prism may target a second Fire Prism if it is in range and in Line of Sight. This redirection is automatic. The second Fire Prism is then immediately activated to shoot, and may also use its own shots if it wishes. There is no limit to the number of possible redirections.

4.10 Ghost Portal

A Storm Serpent may open a Ghost Portal at any point of its movement in Line of Sight and within 60 cm. Place a marker to record the portal's location; bases enter or leave the portal within a radius of 6 cm. The portal cannot be placed on an enemy troop or in a structure. Once the portal is open, Aeldari Infantry, Cavalry, or Walker bases may enter either the Ghost Portal or the Storm Serpent, normally losing 5 cm of movement as when boarding a transport. The base in transit reappears at the other end of the Storm Serpent–Portal link and cannot exit into an enemy control zone of equal or higher class. The Storm Serpent may move without breaking the link that binds it to the portal.

5 Psychic Powers

5.1 Warlock

5.1.1 Psychic Barrage [Combat Phase, Shooting]

The Warlock projects a burst of pure psychic energy. Choose a target within 45 cm and in Line of Sight. It suffers a hit on 4+. This is a Psychic Power.

5.1.2 Mind Block [Movement Phase, upon activation]

The Warlock sends a flash of psychic energy that surrounds the target and immobilises it during its activation. Choose a Class 4 or lower base within 45 cm and in Line of Sight. On 4+, it is Immobilised for this turn and follows the corresponding rules. The power remains active only if the Warlock keeps the base in Line of Sight. This is a Psychic Power.

5.1.3 Storm [Combat Phase, Shooting]

The Warlock summons a storm of psychic energy which he whirls above his head. He then sends it onto the battlefield to break up enemy formations, hurling them aside. Place a Template (7.5 cm) within 60 cm and in Line of Sight. All bases under the template are pushed onto one of its edges, away from its centre. If the storm has its centre in a structure, all bases in garrison are pushed out and placed in contact with it, chosen by the player who owns them. The storm is impassable terrain and is considered Class 4 Blocking terrain. The storm disappears in the End Phase, during end-of-turn effects.

5.2 Farseer

5.2.1 Psychic Barrage [Combat Phase, Shooting]

The Farseer projects a burst of pure psychic energy. Choose a target within 45 cm and in Line of Sight. It suffers a hit on 4+. This is a Psychic Power.

5.2.2 Confusion [Movement Phase, upon activation]

The Farseer gains the Confusion (−2) ability for this turn.

5.2.3 Precognition [Movement Phase, upon activation of the targeted detachment]

An allied Class 1, 2, or 3 detachment within 12 cm of the Farseer may make a Forced March while still being able to shoot normally (without the −1 To-Hit penalty).

5.3 Warlock Titan

5.3.1 Doom [Movement Phase, upon activation]

Choose a target within 45 cm and in Line of Sight. All shots against that target gain a +1 To-Hit bonus (with a minimum of 2+). In assault, the target's AF is halved. This is a Psychic Power, and the effects dissipate at the end of the turn, during end-of-turn effects.

5.3.2 Future Sight [Orders Phase]

The Warlock Titan does not need an order for this turn. Instead, it chooses its order at the moment of its activation. You may choose to give it a First Fire order during the Movement Phase in order to make Intercept Fire.

5.3.3 Mind Scream [Movement Phase, upon activation]

The Warlock Titan gains the Charismatic (45 cm) and Dread (−2) abilities for the turn.

5.4 3D6 in Assault against Classes 1 and 2

A base with this ability rolls 3D6 instead of 2D6 in assault against Class 1 and 2 bases.

10 Infantry

10.1 Warlock

These individuals walk the Path of the Seer with the most aggressive and warlike purpose possible. In battle the Warlocks gather in conclaves to concentrate their considerable power, or join an Aeldari unit to lead it to the front.

A Warlock has the HQ, Charismatic (12 cm), Attached Character, Psyker, Prescience (7.5 cm), and Psychic Save (4+) abilities. The Warlock may use one of his powers each turn.

10.2 Swooping Hawks

The Swooping Hawks take their name from the formidable birds of prey of Aeldari myth that symbolise vengeance. In antiquity, the Aeldari believed that the soul of a murdered person could pass into a hawk, and that this bird could find the killer and pursue him so that all might be made aware of his crime. Swooping Hawks are the most mobile of all Aspect Warriors because they can fly. Their long wings are composed of feather-shaped lift plates and an anti-gravity jet. When they fly, their wings vibrate at such a speed that their colour becomes impossible to discern, and they emit a characteristic whistle. Their costume is the colour of the sky: this may be light or dark blue, or even dark grey or black, always with bands of strongly contrasting colours.

Swooping Hawks have the Deep Strike (2), Hard to Hit, Elite (2), and Jump Packs abilities.

10.3 Warp Spiders

The Warp Spiders take their name from the tiny creatures that live inside the Dome of Crystal Seers among the wraithbone structures that form the heart and soul of the Craftworlds. These microscopic creatures can move anywhere in the Craftworlds, blending their bodies with the Infinity Circuits and rematerialising in another. They have mutated from the famous psycho-plastic of which the Craftworlds are made and have thus been able to develop in harmony with Aeldari civilisation, moving within the Infinity Circuits like the spirits of deceased Asuryani. In theory, a Chaos Daemon could find its way inside the wraithbone network, but its presence would be spotted at once. The tiny Warp Spiders make sure that does not happen by hunting down and destroying any fragment of foreign psychic energy. They function a little like white blood cells, neutralizing bacteria inside the body.

The Warp Spiders' weapons are deadly rapid-firing Death Spinners, particularly devastating. Warp Spiders have the Elite (2), Lightning Attack, Cannot Be Blocked, and Fire on the Move abilities.

10.4 Harlequins

The Harlequins run, leap, and whirl, the blades and shots of their terrified enemies hissing around them to derisory effect. Preferring speed and skill to strength and resilience, the Harlequins wear holo-suits that fracture their outlines into a polychromatic blur, giving them the appearance of an intangible psychedelic tornado into which the enemy pours its fire in vain. But once they close, they prove they are no mirage.

They have the Elite (2), Jump Packs, Reroll Assault Dice, Harlequins, and Hard to Hit abilities.

10.5 Autarch

There is a path upon the Warrior Path that few take. The Aeldari expression for it can be translated as the Path of the Strategist or the Path of Command, and those who travel far enough along it receive the title of Autarch. Within a race that grows more warlike as the gulf of extinction draws nearer, the ability to coordinate the actions of the Craftworld's warhosts, fleets, and fighter squadrons is paramount. Such is the Autarch's mission: to master the myriad Asuryani tactics, and lead his kindred to victory.

They have the HQ, Character, Jump Packs, Damage (+1) in Assault, and Elite (2) abilities.

10.6 Howling Banshees

Unlike most other Aspect Warriors, Howling Banshees are almost exclusively female, for it is said that the spirit of the Banshee is feminine. Banshees are fast and mobile, for their training is based essentially on these themes. Death, say the Aeldari, will know how to find you at the appointed hour, no matter where you hide. It is the same with the Banshees. They are armed with Shuriken Pistols and Power Swords and are experts in close combat. Their other weapon is the Banshee Mask, a death's-head helmet that houses a psychosonic amplifier. This artefact concentrates the bearer's rage and aggression and transforms her war cry into a violent psychic wave capable of paralysing the opponent.

Howling Banshees have the Elite (2) and Banshee Cry (5+) abilities.

10.7 Bonesinger

The Path of the Artist is followed by painters, musicians, and actors. Among them, some can exercise their psychic abilities upon wraithbone, the psycho-plastic material present in all Aeldari artefacts and which forms the skeleton of the Craftworlds. The performances of the Bonesingers allow them to grow, heal, and give the desired shape to wraithbone.

They have the HQ, Attached Character, and Mechanic abilities.

10.8 Fire Dragons

The ritual weapon of these Aspect Warriors, the Fusion Gun, can transform reputedly impenetrable armour into a cloud of superheated vapour in less time than it takes to tell. Aeldari fusion weapons cause the target's molecules to vibrate so violently that they generate so much heat that it ignites before turning into molten liquid and then evaporating. With such weapons, Fire Dragons are perfectly capable of engaging and bringing down any opponent. They know, however, exactly what their role is in the warhost: to annihilate the most robust bastions and war machines the enemy has arrayed against the Asuryani.

Fire Dragons have the Urban Combat, Elite (2), and Damage (+1) in Assault abilities, and their weapon Reduces Cover (-1).

10.9 Dark Reapers

The Dark Reapers are the most sinister and destructive of the Asuryani Aspect Warriors. They represent the destructive Aspect of the God of War; their uniform, reminiscent of a skeleton, represents the Harvester of Souls (death). Their armour is black or very deep midnight blue; it incorporates heavy protective plates that also ballast them to ensure their stability when firing. It includes long-range targeting sensor systems and allows the Dark Reapers to fire with great accuracy at targets moving at high speed. The tactical role of the Dark Reapers is to provide long-range covering fire. They usually take position in cover, often to the rear of the Asuryani deployment, and choose their targets. Their accuracy allows them to dominate the battlefield, pinning or destroying enemy units.

Dark Reapers have the Elite (2) and Reflex Fire abilities.

10.10 Exarchs

In theory, an Asuryani is able to compartmentalise and control his warrior personality, and to set aside his bloodthirsty persona as easily as he lays down his equipment. When an Aspect Warrior loses the ability to dissociate himself from his killer self, he is said to have become lost upon the Warrior Path and then becomes an Exarch. An Aspect Warrior does not become an Exarch overnight, but the exaltation of combat, repeated many times, can act as a powerful psychotrope. Exarchs are incorporated into an Aspect Warrior detachment. They have the HQ, Attached Character, and Elite (1) abilities.

10.11 Wraithguard

These infantrymen are made of wraithbone, an extremely solid material, and they dominate by their stature the Farseers who lead them into battle. Their design enjoys the same organic refinement as that of other Aeldari constructs, and they are often adorned with stylised runes and gems. These mechanical soldiers contrast strongly with their flesh-and-blood counterparts, however, for they lack the Aeldari's celerity. Wraithguard march with the inexorability of death, their sepulchral advance punctuated only by the sound of reality itself being torn by their weapons.

Wraithguard have the Spirit Stone ability.

10.12 Guardians

At the heart of an ever more hostile galaxy, Aspect Warriors are not the only ones to take up arms. When a Craftworld's call sounds, its Guardians answer. Composed of citizens who normally walk a more peaceful Path, this highly trained militia, equipped with advanced gear, rivals the professional armies of lesser races. The perpetual struggle for the survival of the Aeldari race holds a cruel irony: hosts raised to defend the populations, whose fighters are in large part civilians. Indeed, every Asuryani is trained and ready to take up arms if need be.

10.13 Wraithblades

The most feared Wraithguard are called Wraithblades. When the call to arms sounds, these beings are awakened by the most experienced Farseers. Their Spirit Stones gleam as the bitterness of the dead bathes their skeleton. Once kindled, the anger that animates these artificial bodies can be drowned only in the blood of their enemies. No other wraithbone construct is as eager to throw itself upon the enemy as a Wraithblade, which draws upon its pent-up rage as it charges into the melee. They wield a pair of Ghostswords – weapons animated by the rudimentary consciousness contained in the Spirit Stones set in their guards. The swords' supernatural power is added to the formidable strength of the wraithbone constructs; when they fall, the blades leave glowing furrows in the air before cutting their targets with merciless precision.

They have the Spirit Stone and Dodge (5+) abilities.

10.14 Farseer

Masters of prediction, Farseers are the strangest, but also the most visionary, advisers to officiate upon a Craft-world. In combat they can use their gift of divination by casting wraithbone runes into the air, then interpreting their luminescence as they whirl around them. Thus Farseers are able to analyse the myriads of possible futures and foresee the consequences of the least of their decisions in order to lead their people to victory.

Farseers have the HQ, Attached Character, Psyker, Psychic Node (30 cm), and Psychic Save (4+) abilities. The Farseer may use one of his powers each turn.

10.15 Master Mime

Master Mimes are the Aeldari answer to Imperial assassins in their clandestine actions. Disguised in the enemy's uniform, the Master Mime sends false information and false orders, disrupting his unfortunate adversary until the latter manages to unmask him.

They have the Master Mime ability.

10.16 Bright Lance

While the artillery of most other races takes a crude form, the Asuryani employ support-weapon platforms that are as silent as they are deadly. Called “Vaul’s Wrath” in honour of their smith-god, these elegant machines are crewed by two experienced Guardians, who glide them across the battlefield with anti-gravity motors.

10.18 Striking Scorpions

Though small in size, the Scorpion is a formidable killer. These Aspect Warriors perfectly symbolise the aptitudes of their totem animal and count among the most effective Aspect Warriors. Only the strongest and sturdiest of the Asuryani can wear this Aspect’s heavy armour. Though less swift than the Banshees, they are also close-combat specialists. They wear more imposing armour and excel in areas of cover.

Striking Scorpions have the Camouflage, Infiltration, Elite (2), and 3D6 in Assault against Classes 1 and 2 abilities.

10.19 Rangers

These Asuryani are both incomparable scouts and crack shots. They travel across the galaxy, exploring distant worlds and making contact with other races. They roam far from their Craftworlds, even if most of them remain loyal to their origins, and are often charged by the Farseers with long and complex missions requiring cunning and subtlety, so that they may continue to serve their people usefully. In combat they act in small groups and take hidden paths through the Webway in order to take position at strategic points. When battle breaks out they emerge: concealed in their environment, their long sniper rifles then prove deadly even against the best-protected troops, for Rangers know how to target the eyepieces and neck joints of armour. Although their rifles allow precise shots from impressive distances, they are cumbersome and their rate of fire is low. So that every shot counts, Rangers will identify priority targets among the enemy ranks.

They have the Infiltration, Camouflage, and Sniper abilities.

10.20 Dire Avengers

The Dire Avengers represent the Aspect of the God of War in what it has of most noble in martial values: ruthless toward the enemy and devoted to their people unto the ultimate sacrifice. They are the most numerous Aspect Warriors, and their temples are widely spread across all Craftworlds. Their ritual weapon is the Shuriken Catapult, which they use with great dexterity. Of all Aeldari weapons it is the most typical, and as the archetype of the Aeldari warrior, a Dire Avenger must carry a Shuriken Catapult.

They have the Elite (2) ability.

10.21 Vibro Cannon

The Vibro Cannon projects sonic waves whose resonant frequency painfully bruises the target. Enemy tanks struck by a Vibro Cannon tremble violently before bursting, while infantrymen are thrown to the ground, their organs pulverised and coughing up blood. Vibration cannons firing at the same target benefit from the effects of the previous shot and increase their penetrating power.

The Vibro Cannon has the Vibro Cannon (-1) ability.

10.22 Shadow Spectres

For an Asuryani warrior, death in the mortal realm is not a release from the endless war waged by the survivors of this race. They are so few that the spirits of elite Asuryani warriors must often continue to fight, forever trapped in the twilight realm between life and death. Rather than enter the Infinity Circuit of their Craftworld, their Spirit Stones are used to infuse life into wraithbone constructs. It is this Aspect of Asuryani warfare that the Shadow Spectres illustrate, Khaine's promise that even the end of a mortal existence cannot be an escape from war.

Shadow Spectres have the Jump Packs, Hard to Hit, Deep Strike (2), and Elite (2) abilities.

11 Cavalry

11.1 Shining Spears

In Aeldari mythology, Kaela Mensha Khaine carried a great spear with which he could kill any enemy with a single blow. The Aspect Warriors of the Shining Spears temple have chosen this weapon as their source of inspiration. They are the only Asuryani Aspect Warriors to ride Jetbikes, which of course allows them to strike with the speed and ferocity of the serpent. They are armed with a long and powerful Laser Lance capable of seriously weakening the enemy before engaging it in assault.

Shining Spears have the Antigrav, Lance (4+/AP -1), and Elite (2) abilities.

11.2 Jetbikes

The Guardians who pilot Aeldari Jetbikes are called Wind Riders. Their machines are so formidable that a skilled rider can cover several hundred metres in a few heartbeats before shredding his enemies with the pair of Shuriken Catapults that give the Jetbike its deadly reputation. Wind Riders take pride in their mastery of these impressive craft. The fairing of each Jetbike thus bears the heraldry of its Craftworld, sometimes with a place of honour for its squadron's blazon. The colours used are always bright and provocative.

They have the Antigrav ability.

11.3 Vyper

A military innovation of the artisans of Saim-Hann, Vypers are two-seater attack craft upon which various heavy weapons can be mounted. Their small size allows Vypers to pass through every Webway tunnel except the narrowest, and their prodigious armament lets them rival many tanks in firepower. The craft's speed alone gives it a viability superior to that of thick armour. That is why Vyper squadrons always move at a vertiginous pace when the fighting rages.

Vypers have the Antigrav ability.

12 Walkers

12.1 War Walkers

The Asuryani use many forms of bipedal war machines. The smallest and lightest are designated War Walkers. These single-seat walkers resemble the Sentinels of the Imperial Guard, but they are much more agile, for the machine's sophisticated gyroscopic stabilisation and articulated feet allow it to cross the most broken terrain rapidly. They also have more firepower with which to destroy the enemy. The role of these machines is to conduct aggressive reconnaissance. Once the enemy is located, the War Walkers will hasten to pin it in place.

12.2 Wasp Assault Walkers

At once mobile and fast, yet endowed with excellent firepower, they are deployed with Corsair squadrons. To ease operations with the Corsairs' mobile aerial troops, the latter commonly use an adaptation of the standard war walker, fitted with jump jets. This allows the Walker to be deployed directly onto its target from a Vampire Raider flying at high altitude, falling to the ground among the other Corsairs. Once on the ground, it can still fire its jump jets to cross the battlefield in short bounds.

Wasp Assault Walkers have the Jump Packs ability.

Wraithlords are agile and powerful beings that outclass their Wraithguard cousins in size. These colossal chassis are the jewel of their Craftworld, for they enjoy a resistance superior to adamantium thanks to the wraithbone of which they are made. Awakened by the Spiritseers' ritual processes, only a true hero of the Aeldari race has a spirit strong enough to inhabit the imposing hull of a Wraithlord.

Wraithlords exist in two versions: Support and Assault. The Assault version has the Dodge (5+) ability. Both versions have the Spirit Stone ability.

13 Vehicles

13.1 Falcon

The Falcon is the keystone of Asuryani armoured warfare. Supported by Fire Prisms, Firestorms, and Night Spinners, an armoured host first attacks at high speed to outflank and then encircle an enemy force. Striking at full speed and withdrawing before the enemy's anti-tank weapons can be deployed to face them, a flight of Falcons, sometimes called a Cloudstrike squadron, can quickly change position and strike again from another direction, breaking the enemy's defensive cohesion or its attack formations before the main Asuryani assault strikes.

Falcons have the Antigrav and Transport (2) abilities. Their Bright Lance has the Turret ability.

It is found at the vanguard of Aeldari armoured attacks, preceding the main force of Falcons and Wave Serpents, often alongside other high-speed attack craft such as Jetbikes and Vypers. A versatile vehicle, the Hornet can be equipped to engage any target effectively.

The Lynx is an elegant, heavily armoured craft, almost invisible to the Imperium's arcane detection devices, and it is the embodiment of the ancient Aeldari's advanced technological skills. Previously unknown until the appearance of Craftworld Mymeara's warhost on Betalis III, the Lynx is a Heavy Grav-Tank, superficially similar to the Scorpion, but which some within the Adeptus Mechanicus who have been authorised to access images of the craft by certain unorthodox elements of the Inquisition believe to be of an older design.

13.6 Night Spinner

The Night Spinner stands apart from all other artillery vehicles, for it fires neither explosive shells nor even dreadful energy discharges, but uses a far more subtle means to deliver death at a distance. The Night Spinner thus possesses a turret-mounted Doomweaver, an esoteric weapon that weaves deadly monofilament webs before projecting them. Anyone unlucky enough to find himself under a Night Spinner's web will be shredded by the monofilaments as gravity draws them gently downward. The web will eventually touch the ground, but before that it will form a deadly barrier that will dismember all who try to pass through it.

The Night Spinner has the Antigrav ability. Its Doomweaver has the Web, Reduces Cover (−1), and Artillery abilities.

13.7 Fire Prism

Despite its undeniable aesthetic, the Fire Prism neglects none of the murderous qualities associated with armour. Its distinctive weapon, the Prism Cannon, is the bane of the heavy tanks of less advanced races. This unique offensive system uses a two-stage firing process. A medium-power laser directs its beam into a crystal prism that amplifies the discharge in a fraction of a second. This energy can in turn be released as a concentrated ray capable of piercing a battle tank from side to side, or in diffuse form to annihilate entire infantry units. The most unusual use of this technological marvel, however, is to reduce the width of its laser discharge to a thin streak of light, whose concentrated energy is capable of paralysing a battle tank with a single shot.

The Fire Prism has the Antigrav ability. Its Prism Cannon has Damage (+1) and the Fire Prism ability.

13.8 Nightwing

The Asuryani front-line fighter is the dreaded Nightwing. Hated by all their enemies, it is an elegant and deadly craft, capable of outmatching almost every other aircraft in the sky. The Nightwing is the apex of Asuryani aeronautical technology, a superbly designed fighter-interceptor that gives Craftworld forces and Aeldari Corsair raids a decisive advantage in aerial combat. Using the Asuryani's sophisticated anti-grav technology, the Nightwing is capable of aerobatic feats that most Imperial Navy pilots consider impossible.

Striking swiftly at the heart of the enemy ranks is the very essence of Eldar warfare. It is to that end that the Unicorn was created as a direct answer to the slowness of the Vibro Cannon. The Unicorn is a modified version of a Falcon with a Vibro Cannon mounted on its main axis.

13.10 Wave Serpent

The Wave Serpent is the principal troop transport of a Craftworld's armies. An elegant anti-gravity vehicle based on the Falcon chassis, the Wave Serpent sacrifices the Falcon's firepower for increased resilience. Its anti-grav motors are powerful enough for it to cross the battlefield in a few moments and, combined with the wide array of its heavy armament, the Wave Serpent becomes a magnificent asset on every theatre of operations. Operating alongside Falcons, flights of Wave Serpents rapidly transport squadrons of Aspect Warriors across the battlefield, well protected by their armoured hull and behind sophisticated energy fields.

The Wave Serpent has the Antigrav, Attached Transport, Protection (4+) in the forward arc, and Transport (2) abilities.

The rarest of the Falcon modifications ever encountered by the Imperium's fighting forces is the Warp Hunter, a high-speed assault craft that mounts a large D-Cannon through its hull. Like the Fire Prism and the Night Spinner, the Warp Hunter sacrifices its transport capacity for its change of armament. Among the Asuryani, the Warp Hunter is considered a rather archaic vehicle and, given the nature of its weapons, some Craftworlds seem reluctant to deploy a large number of them.

The Warp Hunter has the Antigrav ability. Its D-Cannon has the Psychic Attack and Damages Buildings (AP -3/2) abilities.

The Avatar is the living incarnation of war and awakens in times of conflict to aid the armies of the Asuryani against their enemies. Imbued with the spirit of the Bloody-Handed God, the formidable Aeldari God of War, the Avatar dominates the battlefield; it is a true mastodon of death, three times taller than a man, clad in a molten armour of baroque and ornamental style. In one hand it holds a flaming blade inlaid with powerful runes of death, while from the other a hooked fist constantly drips blood, a sinister reminder of Khaine's inextinguishable thirst for carnage and bloodshed.

Both Baron variants have the HQ, Attached Character, Wounds (2), DR (6+), Elite (1), and Holo-Field abilities. In addition the Baron Stallion has the Lance (3+/AP –2) ability.

The Phoenix has many characteristics in common with the Nightwing, but it lacks the fighter's top-end straight-line speed and manoeuvrability; instead it carries a greater payload of weapons for its role as a ground-attack aircraft. Despite its loss of speed, the Phoenix is nonetheless an exceptional aircraft, capable of mixing it with most enemy fighters and holding its own at the top.

The Phoenix has the Integral Armour, Flyer, and Wounds (2) abilities and is Super-heavy. Its Bombs have the Bombing (2) ability, and the plasma bombs use a Template (7.5 cm) and have the Reduces Cover (-3) ability. You must choose one bomb type per turn.

15.2 Cobra

The Cobra is built on the same chassis as the Scorpion, and uses the same anti-grav motors, but rearmed with a large D-Cannon. Like their smaller cousins, the Falcon and its like, the Cobra is simply a new title for a different weapon. Designed to find and destroy enemy war machines, their protective force fields are little defence against the odious energies of the D-Cannon. The Cobra has few other weapons, for its only role is to seek out and destroy the largest enemy war machines, for its weapon is capable of destroying super-heavy tanks or small Imperial Titans in a single shot.

The Cobra has the Antigrav, Wounds (2), and DR (6+) abilities. The D-Cannon uses a Template (7.5 cm) and has the Psychic Attack, Damage (+1), and Damages Buildings (AP –4/2) abilities.

The Scorpion is one of the largest vehicles recorded capable of anti-grav movement. This Engine of Vault combines sophisticated and powerful weapons with the grace and speed that have come to be associated with Aeldari vehicles, who regard the enormous machines of the Imperium or the Orks as crude and unaesthetic compared with the grace of a Scorpion leaping into combat. It is equipped with two Pulse Lasers but above all with 2 Pulsars that have two firing modes.

The Scorpion has the Antigrav, Wounds (2), and DR (6+) abilities. Each Pulsar has the Turret ability and may, independently of the choice made for the other, either make a Concentrated shot which then inflicts 1D3 hits, or a Diffuse shot.

16 Titans

16.1 Warlock Titan

A Warlock Titan contains the spirits of the powerful Asuryani Farseers and Seers, still preserved in its wraithbone core. These spirits of the dead are not powerless, and they can still fuse their psychic strength, creating a powerful war machine that combines the firepower and grace of the Phantom with the innate abilities of these leaders of the Aeldari race, to create the summit of psychic engineering.

This powerful psychic ability combined with the agility of Asuryani Titans and their sophisticated armament places the Warlock Titan at the apex of Aeldari achievement in the field of psychic engineering.

The Warlock Titan is equipped with two Wings and two Arm Weapons. The Warlock Titan has the Wounds (6), DR (5+), Holo-Field, Agile, Psyker, Prescience (12 cm), Damage (+1) in Assault, and Psychic Save (3+) abilities. It may use one of its psychic powers per turn.

The Phantom is the largest of the Asuryani Titans. Tall, slender, and graceful, it is agile and fast compared with the armoured behemoths of the Imperium. Each of these powerful Titans is the apex of Aeldari war-art, built around a powerful psychic wraithbone core that allows the spirits it contains to circulate freely through the Titan, helping to guide the machine and its Steersman. The Steersman is an experienced master of his art. He controls the Titan from his cockpit, 25 metres above the battlefield. Locked in a state of deep trance, his mind blends with those of the wraithbone to create a single sentience, which in turn guides the Titan, allowing it almost to think, react, and manoeuvre at the speed of an Aspect Warrior. The great vanes at the rear of the Phantom project the Holo-Fields that surround it.

17.2 Revenant Titan

The smallest of the Asuryani Titans is the Revenant. Built with a concern for grace and beauty compared with the more functional machines of the Imperium's Titan Legions, all Asuryani Titans are tall, slender, and graceful in their movements (by the standards of so imposing a war machine), which allows them to move rapidly and smoothly through the battle. To improve its combat speed, the Revenant is also equipped with advanced jump jets and gravitic motors that allow it to leap, disengaging from difficult terrain and advancing rapidly to harass the enemy, before withdrawing at the same speed.

The Revenant Titan has a fixed armament. Its two Pulsars may use two firing modes. In Concentrated mode, the Pulsar inflicts 1D3 hits on a single target. Its Missile Launcher is mounted on its Wing and uses a Template (7.5 cm) and has the Artillery ability.

The Revenant Titan has the Wounds (4), DR (5+), Holo-Field, Jump Packs, Extended Coherency (25 cm), and Agile abilities.
